Are Gathered at Bedside While
Noted Rector Grows Weaker.

AT midnight last night the Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, New York, was reported sinking slowly at the summer home of Royal Robbins of Nabant, where the distinguished divine is dying. It was not expected yesterday afternoon that Dr. Huntington would survive the though, but held out through the evening. Although no hope was given out of any change for the better.

At the bedside are his daughter, Miss Margaret W. Huntington, who arrived from Europe Friday; his two other daughters, Mrs. Charles Robbins, formerly Miss Theresa Huntington, and Mrs. W. W. Townsend, formerly Miss Mary Huntington; his son, Francis C. Huntington of New York, and his two sons-in-law, Mr. Robbins and Mr. Townsend.

The Rev. Karl Relland, assistant rector of Grace Church, who has been acting rector during Mr. Huntington's absence, arrived at Schuyland yesterday and joined the sad gathering.

CHOKES ELOPING WIFE.

Bride of 18 Is Rescued by New Haven Detective.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Luigi Laporta, a wealthy stone contractor of Ardiele, found his girl-wife, who had eloped, at New Haven to-day. Following her to that city, he met her on the street and was taking revenge by choking her when Detective Ward separated them. A week ago Mrs. Laporta, who is now out sixteen years old, deserted him, taking with her their eleven-months-old child. Luigi La-

Perhaps it's natural that you shouldn't—there has never been another store like it and people are inclined to doubt the now.

Here's mighty good opportunity for you to satisfy your wish as to our veracity. We make some pretty strong statements in several places on this page. Come in here Monday—

Suppose, for example, you should see a sign that says 10,000 Waists at 3.00. Sounds unbelievable, but we would pay you 5.00 if you could find anywhere in Boston waists as good as that are selling for less than 10.00 at whatever value we have

And think of the prices! Less than it would cost you for making alone! Less than the materials themselves must cost you ordinarily! But come early, for at these prices they will all sell Monday—

Lot 1—

The most beautiful designs, materials and colors that we ever secured, direct from the maker's hands. His season's business being about closed, he preferred a quick disposal of this surplus. It was a big loss to him, but he closed it out the entire lot at once, and for spot cash. His loss will be your gain if you buy one to one-half dozen of these dresses Monday. The more you buy, the more you save.

Lot 2—

All of these dainty and effective dresses are fresh and new, and made by the best designer in the country. Very few dressmakers could design or make such dresses as we offer, to say nothing of what they would charge for it. Ideal dresses for vacation, outing or home wear. What woman would take the trouble of making dresses at home when she can buy a Summer's supply at this price—far less than actual cost.

EQUALITY OF SEXES

THE OLD ORDER IS CHANGED

French Women in Quiet Campaign Take Their Place as National Leaders.

They Sit in Council and the Judicial Bench and Capture Classic Honors.

PARIS, July 24.—Country to the east of the Atlantic has been making progress in various directions more rapidly than ever, though without those faults, subtleties of discovery and discovery which have been the chief characteristics of the efforts across the channel.
Not content with making use of a place for one of the members of their sex on the Council of Ministers whose business is to look after the interests of the nation, the champions of the woman's cause have recently secured a new feminine leader, Miss Gumbrecht, wife of a well known doctor of the Paris Hospital, to the Paris to assist in a work on the regular basis in the French Chamber of Deputies.
A more sensational innovation, it carried out, could hardly be imagined.
In Paris, Gumbrecht, recently saw her first legislative effort, but she appeared from the decision of the judges, who were charged with the examination of such matters with the result that prevailing here with a will, and without obtaining any success from her first effort, she was every reason to hope that she will be successful in the regular order of promotion when her turn comes to be elevated to the bench the order of things in Paris, according to public expressions of opinion here, will have entirely disappeared. It will be the same as the American society of the same in France. The mere matter of voting will be insignificant to them.

Woman Wins Classic Prize

This work also saw the famous Prix de Rome, for the first time in its history awarded to a young woman. She is a sculptress, named Miss. Lucienne Maréchal, the daughter of poor parents married in their old age, making it possible for her to study in Paris. She was twenty years old and a pupil of the celebrated sculptor, who is now in Paris, and at her success, and who was rewarded by the French Academy with a gold medal. TITLED RICH MUST PAY HONEST TAXES, SAYS BIRRELL

Chief Secretary for Ireland in Startling Address Sounds

Warning.
SHARE BURDEN WITH POOR.

Boston Letter on Gaelic Language Attracts Interest in Ireland.

Special Correspondence to Boston
American.

DUBLIN, July 22.—Mr. Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, has made a stirring address to the House of Commons, in which he has said that the rich must pay honest taxes, and that the burden of the poor must be shared.

The people of the United States have not a faint idea, even with their daily news service by cable, of the amazing progress radical reform is making in the British Parliament. Cabinet ministers and leading public men of all parties are today earnestly discussing measures of reform which, less than a score of years ago, would be heard only in Irish Park on Sunday afternoon at meetings of the unexplored or in the air-bombed of the Whitechapel.

To those in public utterances by statesmen of the present day it is to be determined enactment of decisions which in the not very remote past would have been written down as vicious and dangerous demagogues, entailing the speaker to a visit from the officials of the Whitechapel.

It is not very many years ago since Michael Davitt, now in his grave, and John Burns, who is still in the House of Commons, were both members of the House of Commons, and both of them were members of the House of Commons.

Radical Measures Passed.
Yet measures are now going through Parliament and others have become the law of the land which in the wide sweep of their radical tendencies make the old-time utterances of Michael Davitt and John Burns seem conservative in contrast.

Age, Sorrow, Headaches

Make gray hair by diminishing the pigmentary matter. No wonder every woman wants to hide the tell-tale locks. "I did not want any one, even the dealer, to know my hair was gray, so I ordered FARR'S GRAY HAIR RESTORER by mail and was delighted to find I could easily apply it myself and that it did not give my hair the dull, unnatural appearance dyes do, and did not prevent my curling and shampooing as usual." WEEK'S ATTRACTIONS AT BOSTON THEATERS

ARTIST & STONE'S MUSEUM—Stage show and card.
BOWDOIN SQUARE—"Wealth and Poverty."
GLOBE—"Joan of Arc."
ORPHEUM—"Joan of Arc."
NEW PALACE—"Joan of Arc."

The Fadettes are with us again. After two years absence from Boston this unique feminine musical organization comes to Keith's this week for an extended stay.

"Joan of Arc" will begin its second week at the Orpheum. The ups and downs of life will be shown to the melodrama. "Wealth and Poverty" which will hold the stage at the Bowdoin Square Theater. New "Continental" bills go on at the Globe and the New Palace. There will be new stage-show and cards at Artist & Stone's Museum. The moving picture houses will maintain with novel mid-summer bills. Nourumbega, Province Town, Wonderland and other summer parks will vie with one another in out-of-door amusement for the hot weather pleasure seekers.

For travelers there are excursions and daily trips by railroad, steam and trolley in infinite variety.

Fair Fadettes Come to Keith's Theatre.

The Fadettes Women's Orchestra begins tomorrow an extended engagement at Keith's Theatre. All New England knows the Fadettes and these ladies for their fair faces, their artistic playing and their capable director, Mrs. Caroline Nichols.

But Boston is peculiarly fond of the Fadettes. Many of the forty-five girls who make up the orchestra have been successful here in Boston. They are always ready to give a concert and the orchestra is a well-known one. The Fadettes will be as picturesque and popular as ever.

This season they will give a series of popular concerts, both afternoon and evening, before the regular vaudeville performance.

The bill at Keith's this week is a double bill. The first is a comedy, "The Girl in the Red Dress," and the second is a tragedy, "The Girl in the Red Dress." The first is a comedy, "The Girl in the Red Dress," and the second is a tragedy, "The Girl in the Red Dress."

Orpheum Continues Its "Joan of Arc" Success.

Owing to the unusual success of the opening week of "Joan of Arc" at the Orpheum Theatre, Manager Lindsay Morris has decided to continue that production through the coming week. "Joan of Arc" has been a success from the first, and the manager has decided to continue it for another week.

The production will be given in its entirety, and the manager has decided to continue it for another week. The production will be given in its entirety, and the manager has decided to continue it for another week.

Local Favorites on Globe Bill.

The bill at the Globe Theatre this week will include several Boston favorites. Keith and Lane will give a singing and dancing act, and the manager has decided to continue it for another week. The production will be given in its entirety, and the manager has decided to continue it for another week.

Bowdoin Square Gives "Wealth and Poverty."

The patron of the Bowdoin Square Theatre will be treated to a dramatic novelty this week in "Wealth and Poverty." The story is a suggestive of the story of the rich and the poor, and the manager has decided to continue it for another week. The production will be given in its entirety, and the manager has decided to continue it for another week.

New Palace Has Lively Program.

A lively program of vaudeville, moving pictures and illustrated songs is scheduled for the week at the New Palace Theatre. The vaudeville acts, which form one of the main features of the bill, are a variety of acts, and the manager has decided to continue it for another week. The production will be given in its entirety, and the manager has decided to continue it for another week.

Artist & Stone's Has New Features.

The Manager of Artist & Stone's Museum has arranged a brand new bill for this week in the theatre hall. New songs, jokes and dances will be seen and heard all along the bill. The manager has decided to continue it for another week. The production will be given in its entirety, and the manager has decided to continue it for another week.

Chilly London Vamp to Her Parody on Maude Allan's "Salome."

Special Correspondence of Boston American.

LONDON, July 24.—Miss Clarice Vance is not one of those thin, shrinking bodies who are "type" and who, whatever you ask them and seem to be afraid of giving themselves away.

Not at all. Miss Clarice Vance is a full-blown "vaudeville" star, very large and self-reliant and, indeed, very "type" in her own way.

They came to me the other night," she said, "and begged me to write a play for all our sakes. The idea was absolutely inspired by me, but I was not to be tempted. So I got a script that showed about two hundred and twenty lines of type, and I put it away."

BOSTON REAL ESTATE A SAFE INVESTMENT

IN THE FAMILY FOR YEARS

Steady Rise in Valuations Despite Seasonal Periods of Depression.

NO MORE striking example of the value of real estate in Boston is to be found than the Tremont and West Streets block. The property was purchased by the late Mr. J. W. Loring, and it is now owned by the Loring family, which has owned it for over 100 years.

Not only does this property stand out as an example of what high prices may be obtained for real estate in Boston, but it is also a splendid illustration of the fact that many of the old families of Boston own much of their wealth today in the form of real estate. The value of the property has risen steadily since it was purchased by the Loring family, and it is now worth over $1,000,000.

Always Safe Investment.

Real estate in Boston is always a safe investment. It is a business that has been in existence for over 100 years, and it has always been a profitable one. The value of real estate in Boston has risen steadily since the first settlement of the city, and it is now worth over $1,000,000,000. This is a record that no other city in the world can match.

Land Values That Grow.

An information recently received by the Department of New York has presented Joseph H. Thompson, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Paulding, N. Y., before the State Board of Correction for a violation of the law relating to the sale of liquor. It is stated that Thompson had been convicted and fined $100 for the same offense in 1921. He had again applied for and received a license to sell liquor in 1923, and it is now reported that he had again violated the law. It is claimed that the general manager of the firm in which he was employed had been taking orders from Thompson to sell the liquor, contrary to law and by the force of the law. Thompson is now in the State Prison at Dannemora, where he has a parole of at least seven years and is serving a term of confinement in violation of the law.

Charged with repeated violations of the child labor law, two of our manufacturers in the Ohio area have been ordered to shut down their child labor practices. The court also ordered the companies to pay an amount to cover the cost of the child labor law effort in the United States for the next year.

Goods Stores Get Victualers' Licenses Often.

Because of this complaint from real estate owners of the Beachmont district of Boston relating to the granting of victualers' licenses to grocery stores and dry goods stores, for the purpose of doing business on the Lord's Day, an investigation of the methods employed by the town officers is being made by the town officers. It has been the custom for some years to demand a fee of at least $2 for a victualers' license, and in some cases more has been paid when the officers provide that there shall be no charge for a victualers' license.

It has been a common practice in the town to grant a permit to a grocery store on Sunday and, despite the fact that the officers are not supposed to do so, they have done so. The officers are not supposed to do so, but they have done so.

RHODE ISLAND COAL ENGLAND

Rhode Island Coal Company Has
Over 1,000,000 Tons Mined.
To Ship in 3 Months.

Henry M. Whitney, although not a coal baron, is entirely familiar with the product through his association with the mining of it in the Cape Breton district of Newfoundland. Mr. Whitney some time since became identified with the Rhode Island Coal Company of Portsmouth, N. H., and the recent listing of the company's stock on the Boston Curb a short time since has created a large interest and inquiry among the public.

One who is authorized to speak for him says:

"Mr. Whitney is enthusiastic as to the possibility of a Rhode Island Coal. Before investing in this company he had many examinations made and satisfied himself that the coal is there, but that it can be made commercially available. Diamond drills are now operating to determine the extent of the deposit, and it is estimated that there are 10,000,000 tons in the so-called Rhode Island coal field, and that within a couple of months the property will be in shape for production.

The coal is progressing with the idea of mining it through a tunnel through two shafts, and it is estimated that this coal can be mined and placed on the cars for $2 per ton, landed in Fall River, at a cost of $1.50 per ton, and at $1.75 per ton, leaving a leeway of $3 per ton for profit and to meet competition with the Pennsylvania anthracite.

"To make this coal available it may be necessary to treat it chemically, but this can be done at a cost of not over 10 cents per ton. The coal is a high quality coal, and it is only a nominal cost, and all kinds of tests have demonstrated the value of the coal under chemical action.

The Rhode Island Coal is not a tremendous commercial success. Mr. Whitney will be the most fool man in the United States. The fact that he is associated with the company and allowed to speak for it, and that the head of the company shows his high opinion of it. Mr. Whitney knows in Rhode Island, it was located in Cape Breton, New Brunswick, and some faraway place, people would quickly invest in it; but, being in Rhode Island, they cannot believe that it is a mine, and a matter of fact, the nearest to New England manufacturing centers is one thing that makes the property of particular interest.

Over 1,000,000 tons of coal have already been mined from this deposit in years gone by, but the property has been sold to the Rhode Island Coal Company, and it is now being mined, and in three months it will be a shipper, and Mr. Whitney will again be active in the mining of another New England enterprise.

The company expects to be mining 100 tons per day by the first of January, and to be able to stand in February and will eventually mine 1,000,000 tons per annum. The coal will be sold to Southern New England towns in order to hold down freight charges, and to be able to stand in February and will eventually mine 1,000,000 tons per annum. Don't Be Afraid To Be Yourself a given set of circumstances, he would have no interest for you.

It is always the unexpected that excites your attention and holds it.

Now the chief employment of the human race at present is trying to suppress that individuality, to reduce every mind to the same level, to make every man as much as possible like every other man.

There has grown up through the centuries a thing we call CONVENTION—which means, literally, a coming together. It is imitation on a grand scale—not the imitation by one person of another, but the imitation of every person to the average person.

It is, of course, destructive of individuality and of personality, and up to date it has been highly successful in interfering with progress and retarding civilization.

We ask you this morning to think about convention for a few minutes, and try to find out just what its influence is in your own life.

How many are the things that you do, not because you ought to, nor because you want to, but because other people do them?

All civilized human beings are slaves in the matter of clothes. Men, who pride themselves on their rugged independence to the fashion that makes slaves of women, are, if anything, more subservient to style than women.

Most of them wear high, tight collars, as much of a menace to health as tight corsets, and equally destructive of comfort. Most of them, again, wear in winter stiff, confining hats, that cause their hair to fall out and keep their scalps hot and unhealthy.

In summer they exchange them for hard straw hats, just as uncomfortable and no cooler.

Submit to the average business man that he go downtown without a collar, and he will tell your friends that it is high time an insanity commission took charge of you.

He doesn't like the collar, he doesn't enjoy it; the wildest taste would not regard it as beautiful. He wears it because he is afraid not to wear it.

What is he afraid of?
PUBLIC OPINION!

A prosperous man meets an old friend who is not prosperous. The friend's clothes are seedy. He has that apologetic, furtive air of the man who has been kicked and cuffed about the world until he has come to expect nothing but unkindness.

Perhaps they meet in a street car, crowded with friends and acquaintances of the man who has made money.

The latter looks at his former friend, not to him coldly, and sits down on the opposite side of the car.

The eyes of the friends of his prosperity are upon him. He thinks he cannot afford to acknowledge a poorly dressed acquaintance.

Now, grant that he has, beneath his smug outside, a sympathetic heart. He is really sorry for his old acquaintance, and wants to help him.

As he gets off the car he says to the other, "Come and see me at the office to-morrow."

The failure, whose pride has been battered out of him, and who knows the necessity of eating every day, comes.

The prosperous man receives him privately; perhaps helps him.

He does not ask him to his house; he does not receive him as a real friend.

He is afraid to do that.

PUBLIC OPINION AGAIN.

Now and then you pick up a new book that impresses you strongly. You never heard of it or of its author before. You read it and enjoy it.

Next day, talking to some man whom you think really knows about books, you mention the book that has interested you, and wait to see what he says about it.

He condemns it loudly and tells you that not only is it trash, but it is recognized as trash by all men of culture and education.

Do you go right on thinking that book is interesting or do you decide that you really don't know anything about it, and forever after condemn it when it becomes the subject of conversation among your friends?

HOW MANY OF YOUR OPINIONS ARE YOUR OWN? HOW MANY DO YOU TAKE FROM OTHER PEOPLE?

If public opinion always happened to be right, the continual striving of most of the population to obey it might be helpful. But the average is more often low than high. The men who are really useful to civilization are, as a rule, against public opinion, and only after long years of effort do they bring it round to them.

A boy beginning life in a large city is naturally inclined to be honest and industrious. He is impressed by the necessity of saving and of doing the best he can.

But he finds that his associates are careless and happy-go-lucky.

They ask him to drink with them and to join them in a quiet game a few evenings a week.

At first he resolutely refuses.

Then he finds that he is ostracized—looked upon as a sort of prig, who thinks he is too good for his station.

He is lonely, and loneliness is a dreadful thing.

At last he accepts their friendship on their own terms.

He drinks with them, because he is ashamed not to drink—ashamed of their opinion of him.

He gambles with them, because he knows they think it is manly to gamble, and he is too weak to have a strong opinion of his own on that subject.

By and by he becomes one of them, with all their vices and all their loose ideas of life.

If he wakes up in time and insists on being himself, he will only be temporarily injured by his surrender to their ideas.

He is more likely, however, to become worse than they are, and to end his days in jail or in poverty—a martyr to his fear of what other men will think of him.

Every man who thinks will some day realize that if he is to amount to anything he must some day be himself, form his own ideas and opinions, act according to his own conscience, and utterly disregard what other people may think of him.

In many matters opinion is so set that to ignore it is to be painfully conspicuous. It is so in the matter of clothes. Men and women both wear unwholesome and ill-looking raiment because not to wear it means to be stared at when they go along the street.

But there is no reason for slavishness to opinion in thought, or of servile desire to be like somebody else, when the real important thing in life is to be what one really is.

Every being was created different for a high purpose. It is foolish and futile to try to override that purpose, and to reduce all humanity to one dead, dreary level.

Going about in the world you will meet hundreds of smug, artificial people, who talk in the words of others, who think with the phrases of others, and who act with the actions of others, simply because they are afraid to be themselves.

Of course, they are not successful in their imitations, any more than Aesop's bullfinch was successful in his attempted imitation of the ox.

Every man not born an idiot has some quality that is not common, some aptitude that is different from that of other men.

Let him cultivate his own individuality, and he will make some sort of a success of his life.

Let him try to hide it and to go through life aping and copying, forever a bad actor on a stage crowded with other bad actors, and he will have to confess, when it is all about to end, that he has made a sorry mess of a life that might have been interesting to himself and profitable to his fellow creatures.

HERE are no duplicates in nature. The population of the world is more than a billion and a half, and no two people are exactly alike.

To every normal human being is given the same features—eyes, ears, nose, mouth—yet they are so grouped and so shaped that even a close resemblance of one face to another face is so rare as to attract attention.

No two voices are alike. The vocal cords are less than an inch long, yet they are so varied that you can almost instantly recognize the voice of an acquaintance on hearing it in the most unexpected place.

It is this difference in human beings, and in everything, that makes the world interesting. Only monotony tires. Look at a row of objects exactly alike, and your eyes rebel after a while. Listen to a single note, long drawn out or repeated tediously, and your ears mutiny.

When a baby is born into the world he is a little different from any other baby in existence—a little different from any other baby that has ever lived.

This difference in human beings is called individuality, and it is one of the most wonderful of the series of miracles that we know as life.

Individuality, if it isn't interfered with, will make any man distinct from other men—any child distinct from other children.

It gives to life the mystery and the fascination that make it enjoyable. Could you know exactly what your friend would say and do in

WINNERS OF TODAY'S CONTEST

SHOW YOUR COLORS!

HELP the standard bearers of nine nations fly their flags. Of course you'll readily recognize the leader. Can you pick the eight others as easily? If you can, this is an opportunity to earn a cash prize that may mean a week's outing for you at the American's expense.

Here's the Idea
in a Nutshell

Cut out the nine flags on this upper half of the page. Arrange or fit them properly on the lower half of the page. When you have the flags placed upon the flag-staffs you think they should be, pin or paste them securely, fill in the entry blank at the bottom of page and mail to "Boston American Contest Director," Boston, Mass.

Contest

RULES OF THE CONTEST

ALL MAY ENTER

Contestants are not limited in any way in regard to number of answers. All that is necessary is to cut out the flags, paste or pin on the flag-staffs you think they belong to, enter your name and address (if boy or girl give age also) and mail to "Boston American Contest Director," Boston, Mass. This contest is open to Boston American readers throughout New England.

All answers must be mailed before 6 p. m. Tuesday, July 27. First, Second, Third and Fourth Prizes in the Women's, Men's, Girls' and Boys' Divisions will be determined by correctness, neatness and time of mailing. The latter item will not be so important as where care is shown in placing the flags. While contestants are not limited in regard to number of answers sent in, each answer must be made on a separate half-page, and entry blank must be properly made out.

$300 IN CASH PRIZES TO BE AWARDED AS FOLLOWS:

The cash prizes are divided into four sections. You'll note it is possible for a family of four to earn $100.00

LADY CONSTANCE RICHARDSON TO KILL A GORILLA.

LADY CONSTANCE
RICHARDSON

OF A MORTALLY
WOUNDED

LADY CONSTANCE
AT RIFLE PRACTICE.

LADY CONSTANCE MACKENZIE STEWART RICHARDSON, the greatest woman Nimrod in the world, is going to Africa with the determination to kill a gorilla.

Lady Constance, who is very well known in this country, has already performed the most remarkable and daring feats of sportsmanship and the chase. She has shot deer, bear, antelope, panther, wild boar and other large or dangerous game.

Now, the rarest and most dangerous wild beast in existence is undoubtedly the gorilla, who is not the less dangerous because of his remarkably close relationship to man. The gorilla does not behave like other savage beasts when hunted. He retreats quietly into some wood, or rocky fastness, where it is difficult to shoot at him, and there awaits the arrival of the hunters. As soon as they confront him he attacks them with terrible ferocity, strength and cunning.

It does not appear that gorillas were ever numerous. The earth does not offer sufficient space for a large number of them. To-day they are nearly extinct, only a few specimens lurking in the heart of Central Africa.

Lady Constance has decided to track one of these terrible beasts to his lair. Her wealthy and titled husband, Sir Edward Stewart Richardson, and several of her distinguished relations have endeavored to dissuade her, but she is accustomed to having her own way, in spite of all opposition, and she is going to have it in this case. To make the best of the situation her husband will go along, and endeavor to prevent any tragedy happening to his daring wife at the hands of a gorilla. When her preparations are completed Lady Constance and her party will proceed to the West Coast of Africa, and, having reached the mouth of the Congo River, they will travel up that great stream by river boats. In the upper reaches they will have to be carried past the rapids by porters, and they will need a large force of natives for this purpose. The journey will be a difficult and exciting undertaking, even without encounters with dangerous beasts.

Somewhere near the head waters of the Congo Lady Constance expects to meet her gorilla. Perhaps it will be in the Ubangi country, perhaps in the Niamey or in some other wild and inaccessible region. She is determined to run down her game, in

The Way the Imported Beetles Attack and Destroy the Gypsy-Moth Caterpillar.

How Massachusetts Is Breeding Insects to Fight the Gypsy and the Brown-Tailed Moths, Plagues Which Have Cost the Farmers Billions and Now Threaten to Sweep the Country.

By Rene Bache.

The large-scale experiment in the use of beetles to fight a big pest is now being carried on at Melrose Highlands, a laboratory has been established for the purpose of breeding insects hostile to the gypsy moth and the brown-tailed moth. The insects have been imported from Europe and distributed to the various parts of the State. The insects are being bred in large numbers and are being distributed to the various parts of the State. The insects are being bred in large numbers and are being distributed to the various parts of the State.

One of insect multiples in excessive numbers, owing to conditions accidentally favorable, its parasites, always at hand, likewise proper, and soon, assailing the swarming horde, wipe them out wholesale. The present situation in Massachusetts, in regard to the gypsy and brown-tailed caterpillars, is wholly due to a lack of the customary balance. When this has been re-established by the introduction of the natural checks there will be no further trouble. Wherever, in their ancient habitat, the gypsy and brown-tailed are most numerous, there will their enemies be most plentiful. Accordingly, in looking for such enemies abroad, it has been necessary merely to seek localities where the pests in question were to be found in greatest numbers. Then the egg-masses and Winter chrysalids were gathered, in the certainty that they would contain numerous parasites; and it was easy to collect individual caterpillars and chrysalids which showed signs of infestation. Of such chrysalids and caterpillars about 25,000 were imported last year. All such material on reaching New York is allowed to pass through the Custom House without examination, and is forwarded immediately to the laboratory at Melrose Highlands. There it is handed in various ways, according to its character. Some of the imported moths, for instance, arriving from Europe last December, were placed in an artificially heated room, in order that the parasites they contained might be hatched, and the latter were kept alive and propagated by the moths hatched from the eggs deposited on their liberating brown-tail.

These cold-storage eggs, to be afterward liberated. Most satisfactory results have already been obtained with a species of predaceous beetle (likewise imported), which in Europe is most active as a destroyer of the gypsy moth. Its eggs are laid in the earth near trees that are infested by the caterpillars, and its larvae, as soon as hatched, climb the trees and attack their prey, being even at this stage strong and active enough to assail full-grown specimens. A few weeks later it enters the earth again, and, emerging in the following spring as a fully-developed beetle, it begins without delay a warfare upon the young gypsy. It lives for several years, and during the period of its annual activity, which corresponds to that of the gypsy moth itself, feeds voraciously, the female laying a large number of eggs. The increase and dissemination of this useful insect can be greatly hastened by artificial means, which are being adopted. Even now, after being bred and distributed for two or three seasons, its species is becoming so numerous in the neighborhood of Boston that a special warning not to destroy it has been issued to the men employed in the work of exterminating the caterpillars.

A feature of the laboratory work at Melrose Highlands during the year 1905 was the rearing and liberating of 12,000 flies of a species called Tachinids. This kind of fly, which is very tiny, attacks the brown-tail caterpillar in the Autumn, laying its eggs in the body of the latter. The maggots hatched from the eggs devoured their host, and thus source, thereupon spinning their cocoons, thus providing for the next generation. Much difficulty was experienced in handling and feeding these little insects, but the problem was finally solved by rearing them in special glass tubes, somewhat like those used for silkworms. Another small fly, which attacks the chrysalids of both gypsy and brown-tail, hibernating in the Winter season of the latter, has been very successfully propagated. Being liberated in large numbers, it has shown a rate of increase and of spread under natural conditions which is almost incredible. Last Winter it was found in brown-tail nests in no less than six different and widely separated Massachusetts towns, and, while the numbers present in such instances were small, the wide dissemination of the parasite means that multitudes of them must be present in the aggregate.

Strong hopes are entertained of a "tachinid" fly, relatively large, and not unlike the house-fly in appearance. The

It was not until the Federal Government, has taken up the matter, in connection with the Massachusetts authorities, the work of collecting and rearing the parasites from abroad being placed in the hands of Dr. L. C. Howard, Chief of the Bureau of Entomology, who was the originator of the plan. Some of the friends of the cause have been kind enough to have been fetched from Europe, stored away in the cold rooms of entomologists, to prevent the eggs from hatching and the chrysalids from turning prematurely into full-fledged insects.

The Destructive Brown-Tail Moth, Against Which Insects Have Been Imported to Wage War.

Much interest was aroused recently when a number of European gypsy caterpillars infected with parasites broke loose on the American River New York and invaded the watercourses of eastern Massachusetts. The insects were being imported to the country to war on the gypsy moth.

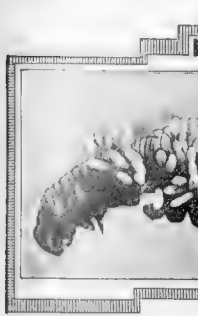

New, in order to make the fight more effective, it is thought to be expedient that both the gypsy and the brown-tail moth are taken care of in Europe, where the insects are bred in large numbers and are being distributed to the various parts of the State.

With a view of further experiments, the fungus was kept in active condition through the last Autumn and Winter, recently at Kittery Point. A large caterpillar, which was found in the laboratory, was carefully inspected and a wound was made in its body, into which a small amount of the fungus was introduced.

Just Suppose It Should Prove That He Is Lord Sackville After All!-- Will "Baby Broten" or the Sherman Twins Get the Most of It?

A MONTH ago the strange fight for dead money was none other than the fight for the title of Lord Sackville. The fight was fought in the courts, and it is now being fought in the courts. The fight was fought in the courts, and it is now being fought in the courts. The fight was fought in the courts, and it is now being fought in the courts.

It is not that. He is now preparing to bring suit number. The old peer replied, "From if I had known Lord Sackville, on the day I had the wanted to I could not," he continued earnestly. "I was already a lord."

The Struggle Still Brewing Over the Brown Millions.

Fifty years ago, when Master Brown was a child, he was a poor boy. He was a poor boy, and he was a poor boy. He was a poor boy, and he was a poor boy. He was a poor boy, and he was a poor boy.

But late was not so when Mrs. Sherman was a child. She was a child, and she was a child. She was a child, and she was a child. She was a child, and she was a child.

He came to the United States in 1841 as a missionary. He was a missionary, and he was a missionary. He was a missionary, and he was a missionary. He was a missionary, and he was a missionary.

Now, when the fight for the Brown millions is over, it is over. It is over, and it is over. It is over, and it is over. It is over, and it is over.

And in all the gossip that is going on about the matter, it is going on about the matter. It is going on about the matter, and it is going on about the matter. It is going on about the matter, and it is going on about the matter.

It is not that. He is now preparing to bring suit number. The old peer replied, "From if I had known Lord Sackville, on the day I had the wanted to I could not," he continued earnestly.

"The North American" has turned her back on the stage and her husband."

THIS is the story of the life of a man who has been called "The Boy Millionaire" and a woman who has been called "The Girl Who Shocked Paris." The story is a true one, and it is a story of love, of adventure, and of the triumph of the human spirit over all obstacles.

Byron Chandler was born in New York City, and he was a man of great talent and great energy. He was a man who was not content with the ordinary life of a man, and he was a man who was not content with the ordinary life of a man. He was a man who was not content with the ordinary life of a man, and he was a man who was not content with the ordinary life of a man.

Mrs. La Rue Chandler was born in New York City, and she was a woman of great talent and great energy. She was a woman who was not content with the ordinary life of a woman, and she was a woman who was not content with the ordinary life of a woman. She was a woman who was not content with the ordinary life of a woman, and she was a woman who was not content with the ordinary life of a woman.

And the Hygienic Method of Cooking Comes Within Her Influence.
